First American Capital Corporation (FACC) was formed in 2002, by the American Indian Chamber of Commerce of Wisconsin (AICCW). At that time, a growing number of Native American owned businesses encountered barriers in the way of accessing business loans for start-up costs, purchasing equipment, working capital and lines of credit – all essential to starting and growing a business.

When a Native business owner hears "No" from banks, it can stop growth opportunities from being realized, force business owners to seek out high interest predatory lenders, or in some cases, go out of business. The barriers to business loans faced by many entrepreneurs are associated with the credit standards of the mainstream banking industry – sometimes referred to as the “5 C’s of Credit.”

THE 5 C’s OF CREDIT

CAPITAL
Do you have assets including cash to invest in your business? Some banks will look for 20% of the requested loan to be an owner’s investment.

COLLATERAL
Do you have various forms of collateral to leverage and secure the loan – such as cash, equipment, commercial real estate, inventory, or accounts receivable?

CHARACTER
Do you have documented experience in your industry? Do you have business ownership experience? What will your credit score & background check reveal?

CONDITIONS
External issues that may affect your ability to make loan payments. What is the state of the economy? What are the trends in your industry?
